Qualifications

Please describe your relevant analytical skills.

My work as an environmental designer at the Lady Bird Johnson Wildflower Center requires that I assess many layers of data regarding landscapes and their ecologic function, and then synthesize this information so that it may be utilized and applied to large scale urban environmental designs. This analytical methodology is not unlike how we should examine and deal with social and cultural issues as they are as complex as natural processes.

Please describe your ability to be impartial.

I have undergone facilitation training and realize that there is no singular answer for complex issues. The best solutions come from a myriad of sources and it is of the utmost importance to realize that it is by listening that we, as a city, can determine the best paths for improving our conditions. At its core, this exercise must result in a redistricting that promotes egalitarian representation and provides all citizens with a means to better their surroundings, and the best way to enable such a process is to allow all of its populace to be heard.

Please describe your appreciation for the City of Austin's diverse demographics and geography.

I moved to Austin to attend graduate school at UT in 2004 and have chosen to reside on the East side because of its rich cultural and ethnic diversity. I have worked hard with my neighbors to clean litter, improve our parks, promote fundraising for or neighborhood association, and increase safety. Austin possesses a diverse population that enjoys the advantages of living in a progressive city that is growing rapidly. However, this growth must occur in a manner that embraces all members of our population, regardless of ethnic, cultural, or economic background and allows their voices to be heard.

As an environmental designer I work daily with improving Austin's environment. You cannot separate people from place, and Austin's unique landscape has contributed to the city's success. Regardless of whether you prefer enjoying a dip in Barton Springs or witnessing the explosion of wildflowers in Spring, Austin's landscape has provided, and continues to provide, a multitude of ecosystem services vital to our survival. If we want to continue to enjoy clean water, clean air, and a healthy environment as citizens we must understand these processes and how we can maximize their potential within the framework of smart growth.

Please provide any other information you wish to be considered during the selection of the most qualified applicants for the Commission.

This commission will have the challenge of ensuring that all of Austin has a voice. While difficult, it is a wonderful opportunity for us to improve this great city. I personally look forward to having the opportunity of serving on this commission as I deeply care about Austin and hope that the legacy we leave will provide future generations with positive momentum and a real voice.

Thank you.
